

CIA JUNIOR OFFICER TRAINING PROGRAM

TRAINING OBJECTIVES

I. MISSION. The over-all objective or mission is

1. to provide CIA orientation and basic intelligence training to all new Junior Officer Trainees as CIA intelligence officer-candidates, and
2. to qualify, through further professional training, selected Junior Officer Trainees for general, junior officer duties in one of the three major CIA components--the Clandestine Services, the DD/I, and the DD/S.

II. SPECIFIC OBJECTIVES OF "CIA ORIENTATION AND BASIC INTELLIGENCE TRAINING," in terms of desired student achievement:

1. Familiarization with the elements of American foreign policy formulation and the instruments employed in its execution.
2. An appreciation of the importance of intelligence in the national security framework, through a review of its evolution in the United States since World War II and of its present responsibilities in support of national policy.
3. An understanding of the roles of the various intelligence agencies of the U.S. Government, their interrelationships and responsibilities within the intelligence community, and the means established for coordination and review of U.S. intelligence activities.
4. A general comprehension of the missions, functions, and organization of the Central Intelligence Agency.
5. A fundamental knowledge of the ideology, objectives, organization, and methods of the major opposition in the present-day world conflict, as represented by International Communism consisting of the nations of the Sino-Soviet Bloc and Communist Parties and associated organizations of the Free World.

6. An analytic appraisal of the strengths, weaknesses, and vulnerabilities of International Communism, as well as a thorough awareness of the challenges and threats facing the U.S. and other nations of the Free World from its objectives, activities, and capabilities. In addition, an appreciation of aspects of the "American Heritage" which may be brought into play to counter Communist activities and ideology, and an awareness of problems of U.S. "overseas effectiveness" which have a bearing on the successful accomplishment of U.S. objectives and, in particular, of the CIA mission.
  7. An acquaintance with the various basic programs and activities of CIA, including the collection, production, and dissemination of intelligence; the nature, purpose, limitations, planning and conduct of clandestine intelligence and covert action operations; and the CIA support of these programs and activities. Also, familiarity with the CIA end-products of the intelligence cycle and with the theory of clandestine tradecraft. In addition, exposure to and limited practice in the basic skills of intelligence and operational tradecraft fundamental to further professional training and practice.
- III. Mission 2 in paragraph I, above, would be accomplished through training conducted in the OC, OFC, OPNC, and the Intelligence Production Course, etc.
